We are in the worst public social health crisis America has ever seen, and with vaping/JUULing, marijuana legalization and a culture that literally grew up with pills marketed as the solution for every human ailment, the threat to our youth is greater than ever and the chasm between what parents need to know and the current trends necessary to understand now, the importance of parental education and awareness can't be overestimated. It is vital! The threats to youth years ago have changed, and the terminology you thought you understood needs new understanding. Despite what anyone states about marijuana, it's benefits, it's harms, NOONE can support youth use of the drug to get high, yet many Youth believe Marijuana is Harmless! What are the conversations you need to have? Where does connection fit in with this digital world? Where do we go from here? What do kids need to hear? Who will they listen to? Getting them to challenge their own misconceptions can only be done by an effective and identifiable messenger. It can't be challenged. The truth is too important!
